has attended the following webinar:

Conversations: Putting Research Into Action – Youth Participatory Action Research: Youth as Agents of Change, held on September 29, 2021 at 1:00-2:00 PM EDT. The webinar presenter was Dr. Elizabeth Salerno Valdez, of the University of Massachusetts Amherst. She presented on the findings of her and her colleagues’ article, “Youth Participatory Action Research for Youth Substance Use Prevention: A Systematic Review”, published in Substance Use & Misuse in 2020 and discussed how youth participation in research and social action resulted in increased community awareness of substance use and related solutions. Dr. Valedz also discussed how coalitions can use youth participation as an agent of change to produce community-specific substance use data and prevention materials.
